• DESCRIPTION

The Enki takes its original inspiration from an earlier Charles Swanson project design—a commissioned rain catcher. With a one hundred and eight inch footprint, the long, sleek lines of this sculptural form flow gradually down into a generous and meticulously sculpted bowl.

As a planter Enki's flume-like body and/or sculpted bowl converts "rain catcher" into the "penthouse" of garden planters. As a fountain this award-winning form becomes a stunning way to feature the movement of water within a garden or architectural interior. Enki as a basin allows you to feature a larger body of water within an interior space.
